The proclamation of emergency allows City officials to assemble resources and personnel to expedite emergency planning measures and boost the ability to deploy rapid response to threats posed by the coronavirus.

"Protecting the health and safety of the people in Elgin remains my first priority," said Mayor David Kaptain. “The proclamation is a proactive measure to ensure public safety and to expedite the procurement of goods and services and emergency planning decisions.”

The emergency powers conferred on the mayor by the Elgin Municipal Code include, but are not limited to:

- The power to lease real property, structures, or both the Mayor deems necessary for the continued operation of City government
- The power to adopt rules to expedite issuance of permits necessary to address issues that arise from the emergency
- The power to redirect City funds to pay expense incurred as a result of responding to the emergency, to the extent sufficient funds are available and budgeted
